A Mendicant Who Succeeds In Extractin iliver From Passersby. An illustration of the depth to which one woman has sunk (or risen) in the art of begging may be seen any evening after dark on the down town streets of street. She simply plays them all, usually side streets, where the young man with his best girl as often glides through because the crowds are not so dense or the lights so brilliant. This woman has two confederates who dress and act like laboring men. Each carries his little tin pail, and each shows evidence of having been hard at work. A young society man and his girl walk slowly along, indifferent to the world. Neither hears the almost inau-dible appeal for help. As the young cou-ple pass the mendicant the men with their tin pails and grimy hands stop short and block the way. "Let's chip in a nickel apiece and help that poor, starving creature," says e of then

"All right, Joe, I'll do it. I earned an extra quarter today, and I can just spare a nickel." This not only attracts the attention of the lovers, but it brings tears to the eyes of the girl, and involuntarily the thought flashes through the young man's mind that if two laborers can give up a portion of their hard earned money he can part with at least 25 cents and oftener more, owing largely to what sort of an impression he wants to make upon

And so a bright silver coin drops into the cup held by the poor, starving creature, a few muffled sounds of "Bless you my children, bless you," come from the anch of rags sitting upon the raised step, and the little crowd of laborers weethearts and object of charity dissolves, each feeling happier and more The young man never knows he has been "worked," so tospeak, and neither does the next victim or the next, for be it known that the programme related above is repeated until there are no lovers parading up and down the side streets at night.—Chicago Times-Her-School Committee Women.
